

Connecting the small green disc to the fiber optic cable

AI Overview

Connect the green fiber optic connector to the matching green PON port on your ONT or service box, ensuring it clicks securely into place.

Step-by-Step Connection

Identify the Green Connector and Port The small green disc is typically an APC (Angled Physical Contact) fiber optic connector, which is color-coded green to indicate its type. Locate the green PON port on your Optical Network Terminal (ONT) or service box.

Prepare the Fiber Cable Ensure the fiber end is clean and free of dust. Use a lint-free wipe moistened with isopropyl alcohol if necessary. Avoid touching the ferrule (the tip of the connector) to prevent oils or dirt from causing signal loss.

Align and Insert the Connector Hold the connector by its body, not the fiber itself. Align the connector with the port, ensuring the keyed sides match. APC connectors have a slight angle, so they only fit one way. Gently push the connector into the port until you hear or feel a click, indicating it is securely seated.

Check the Connection Power on the ONT or service box. Observe the status lights; the service or broadband light should turn solid green within a few minutes, confirming a proper connection. If the light does not turn green, power cycle the device and recheck the connector alignment.

Cable Management Avoid sharp bends; maintain the minimum bend radius to prevent fiber damage. Secure excess cable with velcro straps or cable organizers to prevent tension or kinks.

Additional Tips Do not force the connector; APC connectors are delicate and forcing them can damage the fiber. Use protective caps on unused connectors to prevent contamination. Regular inspection: Periodically check connections for dust or misalignment to maintain optimal signal quality.

Following these steps ensures a secure, low-loss connection between your green fiber optic connector and the fiber optic network, providing reliable internet or service pe...
