

Current Price of Non-Galvanized Cable Trays

AI Overview

Non-galvanized steel cable trays typically cost between $0.80 and $5 per foot, depending on size, type, and supplier. Overview Non-galvanized conduit cable trays are made from plain steel without any zinc coating. They are generally the most affordable option for indoor, dry, and clean environments where corrosion resistance is not critical. These trays are commonly used in office buildings, schools, and other controlled environments. Price Range Small-scale retail (B2C): Individual trays or short lengths can range from $1 to $5 per foot, depending on the tray type (ladder, perforated, or channel) and dimensions. Bulk or B2B purchases: For large construction projects or industrial installations, prices can drop significantly to $0.80 to $2 per foot when purchased in bulk. Comparison with other materials: Pre-galvanized trays are slightly more expensive due to the zinc coating, while hot-dip galvanized, aluminum, and stainless steel trays can cost 2-5 times more than non-galvanized steel. Factors Affecting Cost Tray Type: Ladder trays are generally more expensive than perforated or channel trays due to their structural strength and material usage. Size and Load Capacity: Wider trays or those designed for heavy-duty cables cost more. Supports and Accessories: Brackets, hangers, and corner fittings can add 20-30% to the total project cost. Supplier and Location: Prices vary depending on manufacturer, shipping, and regional market conditions. Practical Considerations Non-galvanized trays are not suitable for outdoor or humid environments because they are prone to rust. For such applications, pre-galvanized or hot-dip galvanized trays are recommended. Despite the lower material cost, project planners should account for installation hardware and labor, which can significantly affect the overall budget. In summary, non-galvanized steel cable tray...
