

Customized Switches for the Irish Industry

AI Overview

Industrial and customized switches for Ireland are available from local suppliers like Trade Electric and global manufacturers such as Kraus & Naimer, NKK Switches, and Moujen, offering tailored solutions for diverse industrial applications. Local Suppliers in Ireland Trade Electric Group is a prominent electrical wholesaler in Ireland, with branches across Dublin, Limerick, Cork, Waterford, and other locations. They supply a wide range of electrical products, including switches suitable for industrial and commercial projects, and can provide guidance on selecting the right products for specific applications. Their extensive stock and personalized service make them a reliable source for Irish industries seeking both standard and specialized switches. Global Manufacturers Offering Custom Solutions Kraus & Naimer specializes in industrial cam switches and offers a flexible modular system that allows for fully customized switches, including main switches, control switches, repair switches, and switch disconnectors. Their products can include extras such as locking devices, key switches, and auxiliary contacts, all compliant with national and international regulations. This makes them ideal for industries requiring high reliability and tailored functionality. NKK Switches provides custom-engineered electromechanical switches designed for harsh environments, including heat, cold, humidity, and exposure to elements. They offer complete design solutions, from assembly and system design to application support, and provide environmentally sealed switches for demanding industrial conditions. Their customization options include human-machine interface products and specialized switch configurations. Moujen offers true custom limit switches and micro switches, as well as modified standard switches. They cater to industries needing highly specific switch designs for automation, mac...
