

Italian Mesh Cable Tray Customization Price Inquiry

AI Overview

Italian mesh cable trays are available from manufacturers at competitive factory prices, typically influenced by material, size, and customization options. Overview of Italian Mesh Cable Trays Italian manufacturers such as Spina Group and GroupSumi offer a wide range of wire mesh cable trays suitable for industrial, civil, and infrastructure applications. These trays are designed for ventilation, easy cable routing, and fast installation, and are available in galvanised steel, stainless steel, or electro-zinc finishes. They come with straight elements, connectors, covers, and installation accessories, allowing flexible assembly and compatibility with other tray systems. Factors Affecting Factory Prices Material: Stainless steel trays are generally more expensive than galvanised or electro-zinc trays due to higher corrosion resistance and durability. Size and Load Capacity: Larger trays or those designed for heavy-duty industrial use cost more. Standard widths like 300 mm are commonly requested. Customization: Custom sizes or special designs for specific projects can increase the price. Accessories: Brackets, joints, expansion joints, and covers are often sold separately, affecting the total cost. Price Expectations While exact factory prices are not publicly listed, Italian suppliers emphasize cost-effectiveness and long-term durability. Wire mesh trays are generally affordable compared to other cable management systems, especially considering their low maintenance and recyclability. For bulk orders or direct factory purchases, prices can be negotiated with suppliers like Spina Group, GroupSumi, or Jeetmull Jaichandlall, who serve both domestic and international markets. How to Source Contact manufacturers directly: Most Italian suppliers provide quotes upon request via email or phone. Specify material, size, and quantity: This ensures accurate pricing and availability. Consider installation access...
