

Price of Sliding Cover Distribution Box

AI Overview

Sliding cover distribution boxes typically range from $20 to $150 depending on size, material, and features. Retail Pricing On online marketplaces, sliding cover distribution boxes are available in various sizes and materials. For example, a wooden sliding door electrical panel box cover suitable for indoor meter boxes can be purchased for around $30–$50 depending on dimensions and design features, such as shelves or hooks for storage. Prices may vary based on stock availability, style, and shipping options.

Factors Affecting Cost

Material: Wooden covers, plastic enclosures, or metal boxes differ in durability and price. Wooden or premium materials tend to be more expensive than standard plastic units.

Size and Capacity: Larger boxes or those designed for multiple circuits or higher amperage ratings cost more. Residential units are generally less expensive than commercial or industrial three-phase systems.

Features: Additional features like weather resistance, surge protection, or integrated shelving can increase the price.

Customization: Fully customized sliding boxes, including specific dimensions, inlays, or branding, can significantly raise costs, sometimes requiring a quote from manufacturers.

Installation and Long-Term Considerations The total investment may include installation costs, especially for wall-mounted or drilled-in units. High-quality distribution boxes with robust construction and advanced materials provide long-term reliability, reducing replacement and maintenance costs over time.

Summary

Box Type	Price Range
Basic indoor sliding cover box	$20–$50
Premium or larger residential box	$50–$100
Customized or industrial-grade box	$100–$150+ depending on specifications and features

For precise pricing, it is recommended to check online retailers like Amazon or contact manufacturers for customized solutions.
