

Procurement of IP67 Fiber Optic Cable Fixing Clamps

AI Overview

IP67 fiber optic cable fixing clamps are available in durable, corrosion-resistant materials suitable for outdoor and industrial installations, compatible with ADSS, drop, and figure-8 cables. Key Features and Materials IP67-rated fiber optic clamps are designed to protect cables from dust and water ingress, ensuring reliable performance in harsh environments. Common materials include UV-resistant thermoplastics, galvanized steel, aluminum alloy, and stainless steel, all of which provide corrosion resistance and mechanical strength for long-term outdoor use. Stainless steel components, such as bands and buckles, are often used to secure clamps to poles or towers, offering vibration resistance and stability under tension.

Types of Clamps

- Tension Clamps: Ideal for ADSS and drop cables, these clamps bear axial loads and prevent slippage at high-stress points like terminal or dead-end poles.
- Anchor Clamps: Suitable for optical ground wires or hybrid fiber cables, available in wedge-type (self-locking for lighter cables) and bolted-type (for heavier loads) variants.
- Round, Flat, and Figure-8 Cable Clamps: Designed to accommodate different cable profiles while maintaining secure attachment and alignment.

Installation Accessories

Clamps often come with pole bands, mounting hooks, and hand-guided banding tools to simplify field installation. Stainless steel bands and buckles ensure a tight, vibration-resistant connection, while hand tools allow precise tightening without damaging the cable. Proper installation includes checking alignment, tension, and stability to avoid fiber damage.

Suppliers and Procurement Options

- Jera Line: Offers durable, cost-effective clamps and brackets for FTTx deployment, with OEM options and tested assemblies for temperature cycling, aging, and corrosion resistance.
- MeFiberOptic: Provides clamps and brackets for ADSS or d...
