AI Overview

Lebanon primarily uses GPON-compatible fiber optic cables for FTTX deployments, with local suppliers providing European and American-grade models suitable for FTTH and FTTC networks. Fiber Optic Infrastructure in Lebanon Lebanon's fiber optic rollout is part of the FTTX project led by OGERO and the Ministry of Telecommunications, including Fiber-to-the-Home (FTTH) and Fiber-to-the-Cabinet (FTTC) deployments to ensure internet speeds of at least 50 Mb/s . The infrastructure consists of: Optical Distribution Network (ODN): Passive fiber cables, splitters, and distribution frames connecting the central office to subscribers .GPON Standard: Supports 2.488 Gbps downstream and 1.244 Gbps upstream per OLT port, shared via splitters (1:8, 1:16, 1:32) to multiple subscribers .Subscriber Equipment: ONUs/ONTs convert optical signals to Ethernet for end-user devices .Common Fiber Optic Cable Types Lebanese deployments typically use single-mode fiber (SMF) for long-distance and high-speed GPON networks. Key cable types include: Trunk/Backbone Cables: High-capacity, outdoor-rated single-mode fibers connecting central offices to street cabinets. Distribution Cables: Indoor/outdoor-rated cables feeding multiple subscribers from splitters. Drop Cables: Smaller, flexible cables connecting the distribution network to individual homes or buildings. Local suppliers provide tested and certified cables compatible with international standards: Fiber Works & Communications (FWC): Supplies European and American fiber optic products for enterprise and FTTX projects .OptiLink: Offers GPON-compatible cables and optical transceivers, pre-tested for plug-and-play compatibility with Cisco, Huawei, MikroTik, and other equipment .Legrand Lebanon: Provides fiber optic cables, panels, and connectors suitable for both indoor and outdoor installations .Selection Considerations When ch...
