

What are some manufacturers of optical cable crimping equipment

AI Overview

Key manufacturers of optical cable crimping equipment include Jonard Industries, Paladin Tools, Corning Fiber, AFL, and FiberXP, offering a range of hand, pneumatic, and semi-automatic crimping solutions. Leading Manufacturers and Brands

Jonard Industries Corp. – A major U.S.-based manufacturer of fiber optic tools, including crimpers, termination kits, and specialized fiber optic installation tools for telecom, CATV, and datacom applications.

Paladin Tools – Offers a wide selection of fiber optic crimping tools and accessories, including die sets for connectors like SMA, ST, SC, FC, LC, and MTRJ.

Corning Fiber Products – Provides high-quality fiber optic crimpers and cleaving tools, widely used in professional fiber installation and maintenance.

AFL – Supplies fiber optic crimping tools and connector kits for both field and production environments, supporting various connector types.

FiberXP – Offers crimping tools and accessories for fiber optic connectors, including field-replaceable die sets for different connector standards.

Specialized Distributors – Companies like Fiber Optic Center distribute pneumatic and ratcheted crimping machines, such as the CT 34S, designed for high-force crimping of insulated and non-insulated connectors.

Additional Options

Alibaba Suppliers – Various manufacturers provide semi-automatic and industrial fiber crimping machines suitable for large-scale production, including machines with single or twin-screw setups for precise fiber shaping and crimping.

Other Brands – Miller-Ripley Tools, Petro Comm, and Paladin offer specialized crimping and cable preparation tools for both field and lab use. These manufacturers cover a broad spectrum of fiber optic crimping needs, from hand-operated crimpers for field technicians to industrial-grade machines for mass production, ensuring compatibility with multiple connector types and fiber diameters.
