AI Overview

Key manufacturers and distributors of optical cable splice boxes in South Africa include Dartcom, RJ Connect, Redstrut Networking, Fibre Utility Networks, and Cable Feeder Systems Africa (CFS). Dartcom supplies a wide range of indoor and outdoor fibre optic solutions, including splice closures, wall-mounted distribution closures, and boundary boxes. Their products are designed for both underground and aerial networks, supporting various fibre cable types and configurations. Dartcom also provides specialized cabinetry for datacentres and high-security containers for infrastructure protection. RJ Connect manufactures the FIMP-XL splice box, which comes pre-equipped with a splice tray, couplings, pigtails, and cable glands. The modular design allows for customization in housing color, assembly, and mounting options, including wall and DIN rail installation. The FIMP-XL supports multiple connector types such as SC, LC, FC, and E-2000, making it suitable for diverse network setups. Redstrut Networking offers Fibre Splice Boxes that integrate splicing, splitting, and cable connection in a single unit. Their boxes are IP65 rated, made from high-quality ABS material, and suitable for both indoor and outdoor use. They include 8-core splice cassettes compatible with SC or LC mid-couplers, providing secure and organized housing for fibre optic splicing. Fibre Utility Networks provides turnkey fibre optic solutions, including installation and fusion splicing services. While primarily focused on service provision, they also supply fibre optic enclosures and splice boxes for various industrial and commercial applications. Cable Feeder Systems Africa (CFS) is a distributor of fibre enclosures and optical networking equipment across South Africa, with logistics centres in Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban, Gqeberha, and Bloemfontein. They of...
